Common Questions This Guide Answers

1. Does MyBudget help with parental leave income planning? → Yes, covering employer-paid, unpaid, and government Parental Leave Pay schemes
2. Does MyBudget include Family Tax Benefit and Child Care Subsidy in budget plans? → We can include confirmed payment amounts you provide and update your budget when you tell us those amounts have changed; we do not determine or monitor entitlements
3. Can families still pursue goals like a home deposit or education fund while raising children? → Yes, the plan balances immediate family costs with longer-term financial goals simultaneously

MyBudget Pty Ltd – Having Children: Planning Your Finances for a Growing Family

Since 1999 we have helped more than 130,000 Australians live life free from money worries. New parents are one of our largest client groups, and we understand exactly what this season brings.

How you know you are here

- You are expecting a first, second, or later child
- You are planning parental leave and want to know how the numbers stack up
- You receive confirmed government payments and want to include them in your household budget
- You are trying to save for the initial baby costs and the ongoing expenses that follow
- You want to plan ahead for childcare, school fees, and everything in between
- You want a partner and a plan to catch what you might otherwise miss

What MyBudget Pty Ltd does when you are here

Plan for parental leave income

Parental leave can change cash flow. Your budget can map expected employer payments, government payments and unpaid periods so you can assess upcoming gaps and adjustments.

Family Tax Benefit and Child Care Subsidy

If you receive government payments, we can include the confirmed amounts in your budget and adjust the plan when you tell us those payments have changed. We do not determine eligibility, calculate entitlements or monitor how income and assets may affect government payments. Confirm your entitlement with Services Australia or the relevant government agency.

The real cost of a baby

Include nappies, childcare, medical expenses and other expected child-related costs in the budget. Update estimates as needs change, and discuss an affordable buffer for unexpected costs.

Bigger goals still on the table

Having a child does not mean putting everything else on hold. You can still work toward a home deposit, a family holiday, or an education fund at the same time as raising kids. Your plan just needs to be honest about what fits right now and what can build over time. We help you see both.

Adjust as they grow

Kids do not get cheaper as they get older. Childcare gives way to school fees, which give way to activities, uniforms, devices, and excursions. Your Money Coach reviews your plan regularly to reflect where your family is right now, not where it was twelve months ago. You get 12 months of visibility at every stage, so you are always planning ahead rather than catching up.

Planning for your growing family

Becoming a parent changes both everyday costs and future priorities. We help you plan for the transition, including changing income, childcare, household bills and savings goals.

We’re here to help you put your plan into practice.
